

neral she took her bed upon which she lingered several weeks with the same disease that preyed upon the vitals of her two loving sons for whom it may be said she sacrificed her life with that devotion which finds existence only in the secret recesses of a mother's loving heart. She left this world in the triumphs of a living faith to join the angelic host in praising him who died for them that they might live. Joy unspeakable and full of glory. First the cross, then the crown.

The husband, a son and two daughters survive her. The Lord abundantly bless them and give them grace to say, "Thy will be done"

Funeral services were conducted by Brother S. Mikesell assisted by the writer.

S. KIEHL.

REPLOGLE.—Died March 24th, 1894, near Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa., of a complication of diseases, Leah Replogle, aged 52 years, 11 months and 21 days. She was the daughter of George and Polly Replogle, deceased. She had never married, having been an invalid almost from infancy. Though the vital flame burned dimly, she was blessed with strong mental faculties, which were, however, held in check by the frailty of their tenement. She became a member of the German Baptist church when quite young and remained a faithful and consistent member during her life, and when death came she expressed herself ready, and the mortal succumbed to the fell destroyer to await the resurrection of the just. She has a goodly account of deed of charity in the ledger of heaven. Her friends are comforted with the assurance that she is triumphantly wearing the diadems of sainthood. Her remains were buried in the cemetery near New Enterprise, by the side of her mother. As she had, on account of her feeble health, been nearest her mother's heart in life, it was fitting that she should be nearest her in death, whence the resurrection morn shall see them grandly ascending to the celestial City. Funeral services by Levi Holsinger and Geo. Meyers from Phil. i, 21, to a large audience.

THE ENEMY OF WOMAN

MUCH OF HER LIFE'S PLEASURE SPOILED BY TOBACCO.

Comfort Sacrificed and Health Jeopardized Because of a Filthy Habit—Rev. Madison C. Peters Makes a Plea For the Children of New York Slums.

Tobacco is the foe of woman. It withdraws man from her society, banishing him for hours from the civilizing sex. Thackeray says, "The fact is, the cigar is a rival to the ladies and their conqueror too." The Turks shut the women in. We shut them out. Many physicians regard much of the invalidism of women due to the poisoned atmosphere around them by the smoking members of their household. Many a woman have I heard speak feelingly of the clean atmosphere of houses untainted with tobacco. How many a delicate woman is affected by the least tobacco breath, and then think of her yoked to one who uses the weed perpetually!

How much of life's pleasure is spoiled by this everlasting foe! Everywhere you go is splashed the disgusting fluid. The passages between the seats of our railroad and street cars are, as a rule, in such a foul condition that no lady can walk with safety or comfort from the seat to the door. There's little use in carefully holding up your dresses and looking warily from place to place. You might as well take the first seat that comes. No wonder the women lose their temper almost every time they travel in our cars. Just look at the men. They chew and spit, they read and spit, they talk and spit, they laugh and spit, and some swear and spit.

"Is smoking offensive to you?" What is the woman to do? If she tells the truth, the gentleman will not lay down his cigar, but retreat to enjoy his smoke elsewhere, and the woman feels that she has been guilty of rudeness. If smoking is not an annoyance, how do you interpret the conspicuous posters everywhere warning against it where the ladies gather? It is from a loving readiness on the part of the women to sacrifice their own comfort to the gratification of their dear ones that they submit to this tyrant, and in this, together with lack of information on the subject, we find an explanation of its almost universal sway.

If all the women had the courage of their convictions, gentlemen, your time would be short. Instead of for policy's sake condoning an offense which puts in jeopardy your health, which tends to lower aesthetic tone and involves a train of miseries, women, speak out boldly and exert your influence, singly and collectively, against tobacco, and you cannot fail to batter down this ugly brown idol past all resurrection.
